

THE AUTHORS

VALENTINA MARINESCU is Professor Habilitated at the Department of Sociology, Faculty of Sociology and Social Work, University of Bucharest, Romania. She teaches methods of research in communication sciences, introduction in communication and sociology of mass media both at the BA and MA level. Her main research interests are: communication and media studies. Since 2013 she is Romanian representative in Management Committee of the COST project ISCH 1206 Femicide across Europe. She was Regional Evaluator (Romania and Macedonia) for Roma Education Fund program “Improving the targeting of government support to Roma students in tertiary education” and Country Evaluator of WINNER II Romania for UNIFEM and International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Her recent publications were: Marinescu, V., Mitu, B. (eds.) Health and the Media: Essays on the Effects of Mass Communication. McFarland, 2016; Marinescu, V., Mitu, B. (eds.). The Power of the Media in Health Communication. Routledge, 2016; Marinescu, V., Branea, S. (eds.) Exploring Political and Gender Relations-New Digital and Cultural Environments. Cambridge Scholars Publishing.

RAMONA MARINACHE graduated sociology, bachelor and master degree at the Faculty of Sociology and Social Work, University of Bucharest. In 2013 she obtains her PhD degree from the Social School of Sociology, University of Bucharest with a thesis on sociology of sleep. During her PHD studentship she had a visiting fellowship at the University of Manchester. In 2014 she obtained a one year postdoctoral grant at the University of Bucharest to continue her research on the social practices of sleep. From 2010 to 2016 she was a teaching assistant for the seminars of ‘Sociology of the Body’, ‘Methods of Sociological Research’, ‘Social Psychology’ and ‘Sociology’. In 2017 she lectured the course ‘Methods of Social Research’ at the Department of Cultural Studies, Faculty of Letters, University of Bucharest. From 2015 she had collaborations with the Faculty of Social and Human Sciences, ‘Lucian Blaga’ University, Sibiu; Faculty of Management, The Bucharest University of Economic Studies and Faculty of Letters, University of Bucharest. Along sleep practices her research interests encompass dreams and dreaming through the lenses of three main paradigms – sociology of the body, sociology of automobility and anthropology of health and illness.

Rom. Jour. of Sociological Studies, New Series, No. 1, p. 115–118, Bucharest, 2017

Creative Commons License
Attribution–NoDerives CC-BY-ND 4.0

CHIKEZIE EMMANUEL UZUEGBUNAM is a lecturer with Department of Mass Communication, Nnamdi Azikiwe University, Nigeria. Currently, he is a doctoral scholar at the Centre for Film and Media Studies, University of Cape Town, South Africa, where his research focuses on teenage children's engagement and experiences with new media technologies in Nigeria. His research output have been published by notable publishers such as Routledge, Taylor & Francis, Intellect, Cambridge Scholars Publishing, and he has equally participated in notable international conferences in Europe, Asia, Middle East and Africa. In 2015, he was a Visiting Scholar at Xiamen University, China. He received training on the course "African Media in a Global Age" by London School of Economics and Political Science. Passionate about youth development, mentoring leadership and youth advocacy, he has been involved with research consultancies around the young population. For two years, he worked with the Ministry of Education to consolidate research on Out-of-School children and the Girl-child education. He is a member of the preeminent International Association for Media and Communication Research (IAMCR) and his research interests are focused around new media, young people's research, popular culture, political communication, and ethics of communication – areas in which he has published. He serves as Editorial Reviewer for IMC Review, Roosevelt University, and Chicago.

HENRY CHIGOZIE DURU is an author and journalist, and currently works as the editor of National Liberator newspaper in Nigeria as well as engaged in media consultancy. He earned his Bachelor of Science and Masters of Science degrees in Mass Communication as well as a Postgraduate Diploma in Education (PGDE). He is currently a PhD candidate in Mass Communication at Nnamdi Azikiwe University in Nigeria with his research focusing on language, ideology and power in newspaper representation of ethnic affiliations in Nigeria. He has presented a number of conference papers and has a number of academic publications to his credit. His major areas of scholarly interest are mass media and conflict, media law and ethics, and sociology of mass communication.

RAHUL BHAUMIK holds a master's degree in history from the Department of History, Jadavpur University, Kolkata and completed his doctoral research focusing on the history of colonial snakebite medicine in British India from the same department in 2016. He was formerly a Junior Research Fellow of the Indian Council of Historical Research, New Delhi. At present, he teaches undergraduate history in a college under the University of Burdwan and is currently engaged in finalising a monograph based on his doctoral thesis. One of his articles was published in the History Studies: International Journal of History; another is forthcoming from the Indian Journal of History of Science. His main research interests include history of colonial science and medicine in South Asia.

CARMEN VOINEA is a PhD student at the Faculty of Sociology and Social Work, University of Bucharest, since 2015. Her research is exploring the plastic surgery phenomenon in Romania, concentrating on the negotiation of the surgical change between the patient and the aesthetic surgeon as reflexive actors in the context of a consumer society. She has a bachelor's degree (2006) in Political Sciences from University of Bucharest and a master's degree from Faculty of Sociology and Social Work, University of Bucharest (2010).

ALEXANDRA CIOCĂNEL is a PhD student in Sociology at the University of Bucharest, Faculty of Sociology and Social Work. She holds a bachelor's degree in Architecture and one in Sociology, and in 2015 she graduated the courses of the Master Programme Anthropology and Regional and Community Development at the Faculty of Sociology and Social Work, University of Bucharest. Her general research interests are in Science and Technology Studies, Medical Anthropology and Sociology, Sociology of Work and Professions, Practice Theories and Discourse Studies. In her dissertation project, she studies medical pluralism through an ethnographic study of homeopathy. She examines various material and discursive practices that patient and practitioners engage in their efforts to maintain and restore health and how these construct an alternative/complementary medical reality.

